BULGARIA

We arrived in Komotini Greece with plans to go straight to Turkey but we looked on our map and realised we were not far from the Bulgaria border so it was rude of us not to go and visit so we cycled the A23 road just 14 miles of climbing all the way up to passport control.

The road felt like new and we only had a few cars pass us all the way to the top. There was a fresh water well half way up near the sheep farm where we filled up our water bottles. It was a challenging climb to the Bulgaria border crossing, but just thought about the easy down hill all the way back. Passport thought we were crazy cycling all this way up to cross into Bulgaria to have a photo with the welcome to a Bulgaria sign. So we were in Bulgaria for 45mins.

Camping: Wild camp at side of the road

Visa: Not require for UK passport
